Mrs. McManigal spends months sifting through documents

A mountain of obscure county history is uncovered in attic

Mrs. Audie McManigal has become something of an expert on the kind of memorabilia and trivia which rarely finds its way into a history book but provides fascinating insight into a region.

Mrs. McManigal, working under the Greenthumb program for Randall County, spent several months recently going through and sorting old records, documents and notes stored for years in the attic of the old Randall County courthouse. It seems county officials from the early 1900s never threw anything away and while their trash doesn't exactly tell a new story of the early days in Randall County, it certainly fills in the gaps between the broad strokes.

The old documents and other stuff stored for scores of years in the courthouse, now sorted and filed by Mrs. McManigal are not yet destined for the trashcan.

County commissioners approved last week giving the dozens of boxes to the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum library here for use by future historians.

Mrs. McManigal's journey into the past began sometime ago when County Judge Woody Pond asked her to catalogue the names and ages of students listed on the school rolls in Randall County with the idea in mind that the age data particularly might come in handy for older persons seeking proof of age to receive pensions, social security or to obtain birth certification.

"This proved to be quite a lengthy process," Mrs. McManigal said, "as there were twenty rural independent school districts and the records were from each school from 1925 until they were annexed into consolidation around 1948."

Nevertheless, Mrs.

McManigal compiled the list by using each teacher's daily register and listing the students for each year in alphabetical order.

But, soon Mrs. McManigal found that the boxes she was peering into contained much more than school data.

She says she's found literally everything, from brass paperclips to doctor bills.

For one thing Mrs. McManigal discovered the county officials of yesteryear were a thrifty lot. They apparently used old paper ballots for years as notepads, and they bitterly complained about doctor bills and other levies in the early 1900s.

The doctor charged $2 for a visit to the county jail to see one patient or $3 for two visits. Medication then ran from 35 cents to $1 and the fee for an autopsy was $5.

Mrs. McManigal found one document which indicated Randall County's officials got into a feud with another small town which had jailed a Canyon girl. The Canyon folks at first refused to pay the other town to house the girl.

"I don't know what she did, but it must have been a lot from what I read," said Mrs. McManigal.

Finally, county commissioners decided to pay the girl's jail fees.

Many of the records relate to the county's welfare program of an earlier era.

She found a number of records indicating the county buried many paupers in those days. She recalls reading of the death of one little girl whose parents chipped in $9 for the casket for burial.

Between the years 1910 and 1914, Mrs. McManigal said, the county paid out a good sum to provide food and lodging for tramps. She found typed records of

Dowlen eyed by Gov. for dist. court seat

Veteran Randall County Dist. Atty. George Dowlen said Friday he has been "indirectly" informed that he is among several being considered by Gov. Dolph Briscoe for appointment to the bench of the 181st District Court.

Dowlen's confirmation came two days following the announcement from Judge Don Dean that he has submitted his resignation to the governor effective Dec. 31.

An Amarillo television station reported Wednesday night a governor's office source indicated Dowlen would be named the new judge for the relatively new district court.

Dowlen declined to say whether or not he will accept the appointment if offered.

"We'll just have to cross that bridge when we get to it," he said.

The district attorney said the Amarillo station's report has not been confirmed to him by the governor's office.

"No," he said, "I haven't been contacted by the governor's office directly. Indirectly, I understand I am being considered along with a number of other people."

Dean submitted his resignation to Briscoe on Tuesday in letter form and announced his resignation from the bench Wednesday morning at docket call in Amarillo. The Amarillo judge had been appointed district judge for the newly created 181st district court by Gov. Preston Smith in 1969 and had won election to the office in 1970. He ran unopposed on the Democratic ticket in November's general election.

Dean will join an Amarillo law firm after the first of the year.

He cited the salaries paid district judges as his reason for leaving the bench.

Dowlen has been district attorney in Randall County for 10 years. He was appointed to the office by Gov. John Connally in 1964 following the death of T. G. Hull Jr. He had served as acting district attorney for about eight months when Hull became ill.

A 1960 graduate of the University of Texas law school, Dowlen served a hitch in the Army as an attorney before returning to the Panhandle to become a member of the city prosecutor's office in Amarillo. He

Home building takes nosedive in 1974 after record in 1973

New home construction in Canyon has fallen substantially from a 1973 record number of starts in the first 11 months of 1974.

Total building permits issued for this year will probably also be down if figures from the 11 months ending Saturday hold true in comparison to the same period in 1973.

At the same time, the cost per home has risen over 1973 by an average of $5000.

Through November 1973, Canyon developers had begun 60 new homes with the average cost per home of $30,890. During the same period of 1974, new home starts total 41 with the average cost at $35,190 each.

Building permits for the 41 homes total $1,442,797 while in 1973 the permits totalled $1,853,400 for 60 homes.

Even though below the 1973 total, the first 11 months of 1974 are far above the total in 1972, before the building boom hit the city. In 1972, all building permits other than one for more than $4 million for construction of new buildings on the West Texas State University campus totalled $1,192,012.

Total building permits for Canyon construction in the first 11 months of 1973 were $4,546,937, but that total includes a $1.5 million hospital, a $300,000 church and other commercial buildings. Total permits for 1974 were $4,343,252 with the Canyon city hall complex adding up to $1.33 million of that total, a new church adding $390,000 and an addition to another church adding $528,000.

The bulk of the new residences constructed in the city during 1974 were begun during the first six months of the year. Figures indicate 25 new homes were started through June with new home starts averaging about three per month since the mid-year mark.

A big spurt in the housing boom in the city came in August 1973 when 13 homes were started. The years 1974 and 1973 compare favorably in number of new homes begun for the first six months of both years.

Canyon developers had hoped 1974 would be a banner year for home construction, following a wave of industrial expansion in Amarillo and the surrounding area. However, the availability of money has made a dent in their efforts.

Most developers and the Canyon Chamber of Commerce believe the city is still short of housing to fill the needs of those who would like to live here.

Two new developments have recently gone through the various platting and zoning procedures for development. They are the Tierra Blanca addition, being developed by A. L. Crossland in the southeast portion of the city, and a portion of the Hunsley Hills subdivision, being developed by A. W. Lair.

Bentsen favors federal sharing

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas is in favor of a continuation of the federal revenue sharing program, which will mean about $1 million to Randall County and the City of Canyon before current funding expires next year.

Bentsen is the third of four politicians to respond to a resolution passed two months ago by Canyon city commissioners calling for an extension of the federal funding program.

Only Congressman-elect Jack

Hightower of Vernon has not made a formal statement on his feelings concerning the continuation of the revenue sharing program.

In a letter to Mayor Manly Bryan, Bentsen notes his support of the program.

"I am aware that the Revenue Sharing Program has helped many state and local governments meet their growing fiscal needs and I will support extension of this program," he said. "As a member of the Senate Finance Committee, which has jurisdiction over this piece of legislation, I will be reviewing Revenue Sharing very carefully to determine the most appropriate funding level and which modifications may be needed."

U.S. Sen. John Tower recently wrote the commission that he is not only supporting the continuation of the program but will sponsor the bill to put the measure through the Congress.

U.S. Rep. Bob Price remained non-committal on the continuation of revenue sharing in a letter to the commission, although he had earlier told The News he would favor the program. Price was defeated in a bid for re-election in November by Hightower.

Commissioners in resolution form showed their support for the revenue sharing program and called for its continuation. The resolution also asked the two senators and congressmen to make their opinions known in written statements.

More than $500,000 is to be realized, he said.

There wasn't much of it, but what there was sure made good snowballs, the first of the season and Cathy Rapp, Canyon city clerk, couldn't wait to try her winter prowess on a News photographer. The first snow of the year fell on Canyon early Friday, but disappeared after the thermometer rose above the low of 20 degrees.

Faculty protest spurs action

Ordinance expected on speeds on 23rd Street

City commissioners are expected to pass an ordinance Monday night reducing speeds on 23rd Street in the vicinity of the West Texas State University campus to provide for greater safety of pedestrians.

The action is in response to a letter issued by eight members of the faculty of the WTSU School of Fine Arts two months ago calling for action by the city to make safer the highway which runs north and south by the fine arts building.

City Manager George Louder said Friday that Police Chief Al Stewart asked for a speed study of the highway following a car-pedestrian accident near the fine arts building in late September. The accident had spurred the faculty letter calling for safety on the street.

Louder said the Texas Highway Department conducted the study and has recommended the speed limit reductions which will go into effect following the anticipated action by commissioners Monday night.

The highway department will also paint crosswalk markings on each intersection controlled by traffic signals along the length of 23rd, Louder said.

In a memo to commissioners, Louder said officials hope "the reduction of speed will contribute to the public safety of both pedestrians and the drivers of motor vehicles adjacent to the West Texas State University campus."

If the ordinance is passed as presented, speed limits will be changed as follows:

* From the U.S. 60 intersecting bridge with U.S. 87 to 60 feet north of Spur 48, the speed will be reduced to 40 miles per hour

* From the north city limits to the U.S. 60 bridge, the speed will be dropped to 45 miles per hour

* From Spur 48 to 2nd Avenue the speed will be reduced to 30 miles per hour.

Currently, cars whiz by the university campus arts facility at 40 miles per hour.

The faculty letter, signed by Dr. Emilio Caballero, art department head, among others, cited the high speeds allowed near the campus and the lack of marked crosswalks as hazards to students attempting to cross the city's busiest street.

Other items scheduled for city commission consideration include a resolution authorizing Louder to draw up a grant re-

City eligible for grant from feds

City Manager George Louder met last week with representatives of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission to discuss the possible availability to Canyon of a federal grant for community projects.

Louder said Friday he has received final guidelines for eligibility and it appears Canyon is eligible to receive funding. However, he said he has not had time to go over the guidelines in full and is not sure whether Canyon would meet fully all the criteria set out for funding.

He had indicated earlier that due to the priority system used in granting funds through the program, Canyon might not be eligible for much if any of the money, which is made available through the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The City of Amarillo recently received a hefty grant through the program and has been conducting town-hall type meetings to decide how to spend the money.

Louder said once he has thoroughly reviewed the guidelines, he will present the program to city commissioners for their perusal. If funding is available and accepted, a vehicle for public input to determine how the money should be spent must be established, the city manager said.

Because the deadline for application for the funding is only three months away, Louder said, it might be best to call on the public for ideas through a town-hall meeting and also through a mailed questionnaire. The city manager gave no specifics on programs he feels the city needs and could use the money for.

He said the money needn't be spent in a lump sum for one project but could be used for various projects in any area of city involvement — sewers, streets, sanitation, health, recreation, protection.

Louder is enthusiastic about the federal program because it is billed as a form of revenue sharing and places responsibility for the program and development of projects in the hands of local officials rather than with Washington officials. He said the only guidelines on use of the funding will be guidelines established locally.

Whether Canyon will be in a competitive stance for funding through the program is another question, one which will be

Says Pioneer's prices are fair and justifiable

City representative forecasts ever-higher gas prices for users

Canyon natural gas customers can expect their gas bills to rise substantially this winter over last winter's fees, but the increases are fair and justifiable, a representative of cities on Pioneer Natural Gas Company's West Texas system reported last week.

Fred Poe, assistant city manager at Midland and chairman of the ad hoc West Texas Utilities Committee, spent two days in Pioneer offices last month to review the company's rates and justification for the rates and issued a written report to the cities Friday. He had been asked to meet with Pioneer at a Lubbock meeting of the cities two months ago.

Poe said he feels the company is dealing squarely with the consumers in the various West Texas cities it serves. City officials had become concerned over a steady rise in the cost-of-gas pass through given customers during the past year. Canyon's franchise with the firm allows them to pass the cost of gas Pioneer must pay in the field to the customer directly and this cost has risen dramatically since January. Regular rates charged by the company have remained constant under city-company agreements.

After his visit to the Pioneer offices, Poe says the cost of gas has increased primarily due to the demand for natural gas.

Last winter, he notes, the company was paying a relatively low price for gas at the well head. Now, 10 months later, the company must compete for the gas with prices ranging from twice to three times the price paid last winter.

"To understand why Pioneer's cost of gas has gone up there are several factors one must realize," he said. "Each year a gas supply company must attempt to buy as much gas as it sells if they are to maintain their reserves. Pioneer has been able to buy about 228 billion cubic feet in 1974 while using only about 210. During 1973 they bought less than they sold."

This year, Poe says, Pioneer's contract with its largest gas supplier expired and the firm had to renegotiate the contract at a price nearly four times higher than the old contract price.

The same holds true, Poe says, for other contracts the firm has made. The prices in the field have simply risen. Nevertheless, Poe notes in his report, many contracts with other companies have been signed for prices even higher than those paid by Pioneer.

With the cost of gas increasing, Canyon customers can expect to see their winter gas bills rise substantially, Poe said.

"Based on the assumption that they use the same amount of gas as they did last winter, the cost of gas to the domestic user will go up about 32 per cent over last winter," Poe predicts. "Their average bill last winter for the four winter months was $14.83. This winter that will probably be about $19.72. The average household paid almost exactly $100 for gas in 1973. During 1974 they will pay about $117 or a total increase for the year of 17 per cent."

Poe sees no break in the continuing rise in the cost of gas and thus the cost to the consumer. "I see no prospects for holding the line on gas prices in the next few years," he says. "Even if

Whence Conservatives?

By ANN BROWN
The connotation of the words "conservative" and "liberal" has changed so much in the last generation that one is prone to ask with Shakespeare, "What's in a name?"

Basically, the difference between conservatives and liberals is gauged by the different perceptions they hold of man and the state.

The conservative believes every man should have rights to sit "under his own vine and fig tree," and choose whom he pleases to sit with him—live and let live.

The liberal insists the state should decide what life styles are socially acceptable, and impose them on all men for their own good. (Naturally, the liberal wants the state run by liberals).

The conservatives as a rule are doers. The liberals are dreamers. Granted, every society needs both. But how many workers does it take to put the dream of one man into brick and stone?

Liberalist professors, with a greater zeal for power than truth, have been teaching their students that the business system (which must make a profit to survive) is evil. Everyone, they say, is entitled to a non-competitive, interesting, meaningful job.

The government, the educational system, and the foundations offer about the only situations meeting the "intellectual's" high standards.

However, if America is to remain productive enough to support our mushrooming bureaucracy, and produce more than $80 billion annually for education, the majority of Americans will have to do work that is reasonably dull and routine.

At the last account, the federal tax burden averaged $3,642 per household. Out of that $3,642, $1,402 went for health and welfare (including social security), and $1,099 went for national defense.

Cleaning sewers, sweeping floors, building automobiles, stocking shelves, driving trucks, feeding cattle, and plowing furrows may not be inspiring work, but if it isn't done, the wheels of America will not turn. Television seems to have given this generation the impression that life should be all fun and games; needs should be automatically supplied, and ordinary work is something they are not expected to do.

The financial giants of the past may have been guilty of making excessive profits, but they added to the nation's economy, and were a lesser threat to the liberties of the people than are the current social equalizers.

The robber-barons had no desire to force people into molds; when the work day ended, the worker was free.

Our educational system has produced masses of people who are physically adult but emotionally and intellectually adolescent. They aspire to live intellectual lives but lack the capacity.

The overwhelming evidence that the average person does not possess the ability to master college work has so outraged the liberals that they have demanded college standards either be lowered or ignored.

And when the poorly-qualified graduate cannot compete in the business world, the liberal condemns the business world, and demands the incompetent be kept on the payroll anyway.

Inept employees handicap and frustrate their employers, but the major cost of their inadequacies is actually paid by the consumers in higher living costs. That includes everyone—even the bungling employees.

If society profits when each person does the kind of work he can do most productively, why not keep it that way? That would be admitting, however, that all men are not created equal, and that outrages the liberals most of all.

As long as the majority of American children had foreign-born parents, the greatness of this country and its endless opportunities were regarded with wonder and delight.

Now that the majority of parents have known nothing but the advantages offered by our land of plenty, many children grow up expecting the best of everything whether they have earned it or not.

The only way to get something one has not earned it to take it from someone who has earned it.

The conservative contends a free state enables a man to control what he earns.

The liberal contends the state should control all earnings. (How liberal does that sound?)

All the polls say the majority of Americans are conservatives. Where were they during the last election?

Student Works Due Airing

Compositions by students of West Texas State University's Music Department will be performed in recital Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Branding Iron Theatre.

The young composers, all students of associate professor Dr. Norman Joseph Nelson, are Carol Sublette, Dalhart senior; Steve Winslow, Canyon senior; Don Harrington, El Paso sophomore; and Alan Demus, Canyon graduate student.

In addition, five settings of the "Benedictus" by 16th century composer students Fred Mays, Richard Grey, Pam Waldrip, Candace Dodgen and Wayne Hood will be performed.

Performing mediums include instrumental solos by Sublette, Winslow and Harrington; a mixed wind quartet by Martin; and an ensemble consisting of voices, various instruments and pre-recorded electronic tape by Demus.

"All the information we're trying to teach in music theory comes to a head in the process of composition," Dr. Nelson pointed out, adding "If our theory program at WT differs from others around the country, it is in the great emphasis we place on creativity."

The Case For Pay

By CARROLL WILSON
Dist. Atty. George Dowlen, Sheriff Cliff Longest, County Clerk LeRoy Hutton, several of their staff members and a host of other Randall County employees should be working some place else.

But for some undefined magnetism which ties them to the county courthouse, these folks should be giving of their time and talents elsewhere.

No doubt, if money were all-important, they would be working in other jobs.

Cliff Longest, for example, could probably go to work as the chief deputy of Potter County and draw more money. The sheriff is paid $1000 per month—less than the Potter chief deputy makes and far less than Sheriff T.L. Baker makes.

Needless to say, Longest's chief deputy, Cecil Johnson, makes far less than the chief deputy in Potter County. Johnson pulls down $845 per month.

George Dowlen, Randall County's district attorney for 10 years, makes $16,000 per year, about $8000 a year less than his counterpart in Potter County.

That $16,000, by the way, is not paid by Randall County taxpayers, but comes from the state. County commissioners provide a token supplement of less than $1000 per year to the state salary.

LeRoy Hutton makes $825 per month, hardly equivalent to what other counties are paying and far less than a commensurate salary in the business world.

Cliff Longest is acknowledged to be not just a good sheriff, but a darn good sheriff. George Dowlen was named Prosecutor of the Year last year for the state of Texas. He's recognized throughout the state as an expert on criminal law and prosecutions, and speaks to dozens of lay and attorney groups annually on various aspects of the Texas criminal justice system.

LeRoy Hutton is recognized throughout the state as a leader in the use of computerized voting techniques and has acted as advisor to counties as large as Bexar County on computerized voting. Others in the field do not hesitate to call on Hutton for his store of knowledge about computer applications to voting, and even out-of-state clerks have been known to seek his advice.

There are dozens of other county employees in dozens of other jobs in the courthouse who are simply underpaid by any standards. Yes, there are some who do not measure up to their current salaries, but it is unreasonable and certainly inequitable to penalize dozens of solid, hard-working employees by paying them the same dreary salaries paid those who do not work hard.

It has been by good fortune that the taxpayers of Randall County have retained quality officers and employees. Because of this, they have not been because of the pay these folks receive.

Until last summer, county commissioners set pay scales only once each year—during their first meeting in January. During recent years, the budgets have called for pay raises across-the-board for employees and elected officials of about 5 or 6 percent.

Last summer, though, commissioners broke their policy and later changed it altogether, when inflation finally caught up with employee salaries and a few employees, apparently possessing the strongest lungs and employed by the longest lobbyist, had their salaries raised, ostensibly because they threatened to quit if they didn't get pay hikes.

For 1975, commissioners have ginned up another magnanimous 6 percent across-the-board raise. Due to the rises in the cost-of-living nationally, rises which total near the 20 percent mark, Randall County employees, already on thrifty salaries, are actually losing money with the 6 percent increase in pay.

On the other hand is the attitude of county commissioners, for years conservative men who adhere to the far right side of a corollary of the Puritan Work Ethic which goes something like this: If a penny saved is a penny earned, a penny saved will also place county commissioners one step closer to heaven.

That's gotta be the reason for their tight-fisted stance on employee salaries, because by action the commissioners indicate there is no other reason.

They don't flinch when it comes to doling out several thousand dollars for a new piece of road equipment. Nor do they flinch—in fact they go to illegal lengths to do it—when they want to buy several thousand dollars worth of new typewriters. Indeed, they don't even ask whether the budget is sufficient to pay for items when they are sought in public session.

Commissioners do not flinch when they pick up their healthy $620 per month checks for their four hours per week work.

To put it generously, Randall County commissioners are fairly free with their money when they dig into the county pockets for their own projects. They are deaf when approached about equitability in pay for county employees.

County commissioners are justifiably proud of the low cost of county government in Randall County. Figures for 1975 indicate each man, woman and child in Randall County pays about $20 per year for county government. Each man, woman and child in Potter County pays about $48 per year for county government.

This economy in government, this efficiency, cannot be expected to perpetuate if the people who run the government are ill-paid and disgruntled about it.

It is far too easy to say unthinkingly that county elected officials know what their salaries are before they run for office, that by seeking election they tacitly agree to accept the salary offered. By the same reasoning, the officials also know in all probability the conditions of their offices and yet they strive to improve and to save taxpayer money through efficient operations. They expect, in other words, for things to change for the better. While things in their offices have historically changed for the better, their salaries have not.

Likewise, it is simply too easy to generalize and contend that every county official runs for of-

A guided hunt in the waterfowl country Saturday morning proved successful to two Floridians, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Crawford from Miami, Florida. Both ducks and geese worked in well to decoys and the morning hunt produced five Mallards, four Wedge-tails, and four geese including one Snow goose. Mr. Crawford had told me earlier that Florida waterfowl hunting was poor unless you enjoyed Coot hunting with a few Cinnamon Teal added for extras. He and his wife were impressed with our grain fed Mallards and especially the geese since he said Canadas were protected in Florida.

Sunday morning was spent Mule deer hunting. This hunt included two local hunters as well as the Crawfords. Mr. John Russell from Hereford and Mr. Mike Hyatt from Amarillo finished out this hunting party. They all three got bucks Sunday, not trophies, but very respectable bucks. Four exceptional bucks eluded us, and that was all right since only Mr. Russell was really after the big one. The hunt was a success and bucks were taken home by each, after a beautiful day afield. Mr. Crawford said that he had a lot to tell his friends about Texas Panhandle hunting when he returned to Miami. He plans on returning next fall for Aoudad and deer.

We are now in the break period on ducks and no ducks can be hunted until December 7. I don't think they need the rest all that much though if the amount of New Officers To Be Elected

New officers for 1975 will be elected Dec. 9 by the board of directors of the Canyon Chamber of Commerce.

Outgoing president is John Childs.

The board will meet at 7 p.m. at the community center for the business session. Attending will be four newly elected directors—Reggie Reeves, Don Johnston, Phil Langgen and Ray Grimes.

Arrangements will be made during the annual chamber sales for the meeting chamber banquet which is scheduled in January.

shooting in the area is an indication. The goose hunting is still building and should peak out around the middle or end of December. It should be excellent from then until the end of the season, January 19.

With pheasant season fast approaching the season opening date of December 14, it would be wise to scout out your hunting area in advance to locate bird concentrations. From year to year pheasant cover is more abundant in one spot than another and these birds love cover, so they move accordingly from year to year. Marginal cover near grain fields is best such as brushy fence rows, draws, or road side ditches. The ultimate situation is a good grain stubble field which is growing up with grass also. The pheasant just feed in the field and then take their noon siesta in the same spot.

The pheasant from all indications should be excellent in the Hereford-Friona area this fall.

Guided hunts for pheasant, ducks, geese, and quail can be arranged by calling Gary Conner, 655-9259. A guaranteed buck hunt can also be arranged for the remaining week of the season. Texas Waterfowl and Big Game Guided Hunts, 18 Greenwood, Canyon, Texas.

A Week of Prayer for Foreign Missions will be observed today through December 8 at Calvary Baptist Church in Canyon.

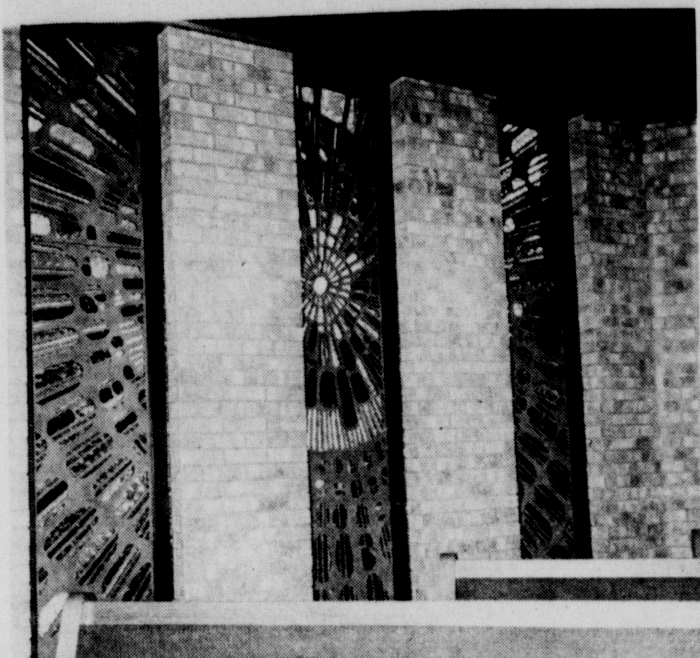

The junior high and senior high classes of First Presbyterian Church of Canyon are making plans for an ecumenical spaghetti supper and film presentation with proceeds to go to the Kelly Forehand Fund.

Chester O'Brien will be guest speaker at the 11 a.m. service of First Baptist Church in Canyon today, December 1. Mr. O'Brien is presently concluding a tenure of seven years as superintendent of missions for the Amarillo Baptist Association and will be assuming new duties as the executive director of the New Mexico Baptist General Convention on January 1, 1975.

The Messiah presentation at the First United Methodist Church in Canyon has been set for 7:30 p.m. on Sunday evening, December 15.

At First Baptist Church of Canyon daily programs are set at 9:30 a.m. December 2-6 for the Week of Prayer for Foreign Missions with a local church goal of $8,000 to add to the national goal.

An "old fashioned party" was held for widows of the congregation of Central Church of Christ recently by the university students. The activity included rides in Model A's, a meal and a devotional program and tour of the new church building.

STAINED GLASS WINDOWS showing a sunburst of color are a new addition to the First Presbyterian Church of Canyon and were made by the Glass Art Company in Phoenix, Arizona. The windows are a memory-gift provided by several families of the church.

SEVEN-HUNDRED CANS of "food for families in need" were collected by the Canyon Junior High School Fellowship of Christian Athletes Wednesday to be distributed to families in Canyon. Steve Zanchettine, president of the FCA, left, and Jay Morrison, FCA choir director, helped with the project along with Coach Lewis Tversky and the student body at CJHS.

Unique English Course Due CHS

By R. P. MANTOOTH
Faculty members at Canyon High School are currently making plans for a course to be offered as an innovation in the English Department.
Entitled "Honors Reading Program," the course will be offered to approximately 15 senior students who have registered top grade achievement during their high school careers. It will be introduced during the spring quarter, 1975.
Subject matter will include eight to ten respected works of literature. Although students will be registered and scheduled as enrollees in the class, they will not report to class daily, as in traditional classes. Rather, they will do the assigned reading outside class time, prepare questions and analyses of the material, and attend weekly seminar sessions during which the assigned books will be discussed.
The weekly seminar sessions will be held in the homes of teachers or students, and a free interchange of interpretations will be encouraged.

Although the entire program will be under the direction of Ruth Holladay, secondary curriculum director, various members of the faculty will assume responsibility to lead separate discussion groups. These members will work on a voluntary basis, and the seminar sessions will be in addition to their regular teaching duties.
John Sommer, Canyon High Principal, said titles for seminar study are being chosen at this time. A faculty committee will select most of the titles, but students will be allowed final choice of some of the books. Plans call for inclusion of some classic literature as well as some better modern fiction and non-fiction.
The implementation of this program was prompted by a felt need for subject matter that would challenge the student who demonstrated particular skills in the study of literature and the English language. This program is expected to provide students with freedom for exchange of ideas with instructors and experiences for social interchange between and among students and teachers. It is also expected to develop self-discipline and self-reliance for students as they participate in a program that varies from the regular daily curriculum and traditional course and classroom structure.
The present quarter system program, although adequate in many areas, indicated that those students could profit by an experience which would prepare them for college and university level seminar-type studies.

Scouts Serve French Foods At 'Tasting Tea'

The influence of the French was presented by Canyon Girl Scout Troop 54 in an afternoon "tasting tea" held for the scouts and their mothers at the home of Mrs. Wallace Johnston, 1401 Hillcrest, Tuesday afternoon.
Special recognition was given Mrs. J. Pat Stephens, who has been an assistant leader for several weeks teaching the scouts the art of French cooking at her home on Tuesday afternoons. In addition to teaching the scouts French cooking, Mrs. Stephens helped the troop earn points toward badges with a foreign language taught through songs and phrases and discussed with the troop the customs and sights of France.
Mrs. Stephens was presented with an authentic French pan by the troop for her instruction and Mrs. Wallace Johnston, a troop leader, presented badges to several of the scouts. Mrs. J. M. Coleman is also an adult leader with the troop.
From the tea table, mothers and scouts were served a selection of French foods made by the girls along with punch and coffee.
Scouts in the troop include: Lisa White, Barbara Hudson, Diane Hudson, Paula Johnston, Jana Johnston, Laura Laycock, Clair Davis, Kenet Baker, Terri Coleman, Carolyn Miller, Sherry Jones and Ella Boss.

Chorale Concert Set Next Week

The West Texas State University Chorale, under Dr. Hugh Sanders' direction, and the Symphony Orchestra, under Dr. Michael Paul Matesky's direction, will present a joint concert at 3 p.m. next Sunday in the Branding Iron Theatre.
The pezzo in forma di sonatina from Tchaikovsky's "Serenade for Strings," opus 48, and the Corelli Concerto Grosso, opus 6 No. 71, will be performed by the orchestra. Soloists in the Corelli will be James Caddell and Jane Johnson, violins; and James Wolden, cello.
"Laud to the Nativity" by Respighi will be performed by the University Chorale. Soloists will be Lauren Fulton as the angel; Rosemary Burkhart as Mary the mother of Jesus; and Cecil Fulfer as the shepherd.
The "Te Deum" by Haydn will be performed by the combined University Chorale, University Chorus and symphony orchestra.
There is no admission charge for the Sunday afternoon program.
You can sell most anything with a SEEK ad. Call 655-7121.

Turkey Trot Winners Named At Junior High

As students of Canyon Junior High School stood in the chill afternoon breezes Wednesday, runners fell into line for a mile-long race to determine the winners of prizes awarded in a "turkey trot" sponsored by the CJHS Fellowship of Christian Athletes.
CJHS Principal, Dave Corley, started the race with the crack of a pistol and Coach Lewis Tversky was in charge of the awards presentation.
Coming in first place in the boys' division was Terry Bye. Mary Johnson won the girls' first place. Both were awarded turkeys for their efforts.
Other winners in the boys' division were Steve Favreau, 2nd; Steve Slagel, 3rd; Joe Watkins, 4th; David Hinder, 5th; and Jay Roberts, 7th; winners in sixth, eighth, ninth and tenth place of the boys' division were unlisted. Prizes in the division included turkeys for first and second, $10 gift certificates from Moses and Vance Hall Sporting Goods, a baking hen, free dinners at the Village Inn, coupons for Mr. Burger products, three dozen Spud-nuts, a gift certificate from Carriage House, a car wash at Exxon Service Station, and bacon.

In the girls' division of the "turkey trot" other winners were Donna Stockard, a $10 certificate from Jean's of Canyon; Glenda Williams a canned ham; Coach Burrows a ham; Tammy Kelly a $5 gift certificate from Thompson's of Canyon; Brenda Batenhorst a $5 check from the CJHS Student Council; Terri Vaughn, a $5 gift certificate from Anthony's; Nancy Walling, a five-pound box of candy; Rene Sharlin, mugs from Taylor and Son Grocery; and Laura Griffin, a $5 certificate from Modern Cleaners.

received by the City of Canyon through the revenue sharing program. All the funding will be spent on construction of a new civic center complex.

About the same amount is due to Randall County, but more than half the anticipated total has been spent on salaries and equipment. The remainder is to be spent on retiring certificates of obligation the county has issued for construction of a new courthouse annex in South Amarillo.

The federal program, begun under President Richard Nixon, is to expire at the close of 1975.

quest for state Criminal Justice Council funding of a tele-recording system for the police department.

Louder explained that the system, which could be fully funded through the CJC at about $3000, would allow policemen to telephone their reports to the police department for later transcription.

Commissioners will also consider a request from Jim Sands, owner of Britain Studio here, for a change in fire zone designation for his property to facilitate construction of a new photographic studio.

Louder has recommended favorable action on the Sands request, which would mean the photographer could put up a modular type building for a studio. Current fire codes prohibit construction of such a building on the downtown square.

A request from the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission's regional health council for Canyon to participate in an emergency medical services telephone number will also be eyed.

The regional group has proposed that Canyon and Randall County participate to fund the institution of a single telephone number — 911 — which could be called by persons in need of emergency help. The number would reach police department officials who could dispatch the proper authorities.

Arts And Entertainment Through The Looking Glass

By ANN MELIN

"What a wonderful show! Alas, but a show only —"

Faust

The West Texas State University speech and drama department pulled off quite an act last week when they presented Mark Twain's view of what things were like in the Beginning. "The Apple Tree" was a feast for all who showed up for the two performances, and it succeeded in harvesting about $600 for the WT Marching Band's trip to California.

Shelley Hamrick, who many will remember for her exuberant portrayal of the all-American Nellie Forsythe in "South Pacific" last year, was infinitely charming and eternally feminine as Eve in "The Apple Tree."

Randy Clements, the Hereford freshman who played Adam, is new to the Branding Iron stage. Although he didn't present the polished-apple performance of his leading lady, who is a senior drama major, his portrayal of Adam possessed a delightfully endearing quality, perhaps borne of his relative innocence to the university stage. And Jeryl Hoover, who switched from his role of the devilish rogue "Don Giovanni" on Monday evening to that of old Mephisto himself on Tuesday, was truly smashing in his part. Hoover demonstrates the finesse of a far more seasoned actor and one expects to be hearing a lot more from him in days to come.

If I am to faithfully execute the critic's role, however, I will have to make a statement or two touching upon the costumes.

My father, who is a retired Air Force officer with the military man's insistence upon detail, makes it a habit of searching the skies in all the John Wayne westerns he so dearly loves. He takes particular relish in being perhaps the only one in the audience who notices the vapor trails of the jet planes that were most definitely not supposed to be around in the Old West. He delights in pointing out the chronological blunder to whoever's sitting next to him.

But it didn't take the purist's eye to be able to discern the chronological blunder in "The Apple Tree." Everyone in the audience seemed to have taken note of the mistake. There did not seem to be much need for an unabashed little boy like the one in "The Emperor's New Clothes," to speak out boldly on the subject.

And Adam's red leotard and Eve's floral gown . . . well, they were really very nice costumes.

In a further effort to raise funds for their trip to California, the WTSU Marching Band will be having a "Gigantic Sale" Friday and Saturday in the Activities Center.

What it really is, said the wife of WT Band director Gary Garner, is a glorified garage sale.

She added that items of all kinds — books, furniture, clothes, knickknacks — will be up for grabs at a price at the sale. New items are flowing in daily, adding to the list which she says is "already a mile long."

I might interject that if custom still holds in this city, the first comer to the glorified garage sale will be Windy Miller, the retired post office employee who has been doubling as Santa Claus in Canyon for the past 51 years and who likes to live up to his role of being the first arrival at all garage sales in town.

The "Gigantic Sale" seems to have come in time for the well-seasoned Mr. Miller.

Diesel from Cleta was a "progressive country and western" band that was really keeping music fans jumping last year when they played stints throughout the Panhandle.

Then they broke up, seemingly following the same sad fate of so many promising rock ensembles, ranging from the real biggies like the Beatles and Buffalo Springfield, to the little known but lively local groups.

Happily, I have news this week that Diesel from Cleta played again this past weekend at the Colorado Mining Company in Amarillo.

The members of the four-man ensemble just happened to drift together in Amarillo after having split up some months ago.

Three bands performed at the Mining Company. One ensemble, Ten High, was the one recently formed by former Diesel member Bob Flesher. It also includes former Diesel member Randy Tucker, a drummer from Cleta. The other group, "Anderson, Black and Weems," is headed by Jackie Anderson, formerly of Diesel.

The two new groups put on a grand performance of that brand of "progressive Country" music that's so prized these days and then the former Diesel members in those groups, along with former Diesel guitarist Rik Wilson, got together for an old-times-sake set.

For two days, Diesel from Cleta had come back to life, much to the enjoyment of the crowd. Cowboy hats were flourishing in the air as their long-haired owners swept them off their heads and yowled and hoorayed over the state of things.

Today, members of Diesel from Cleta have gone their separate ways . . .

As I write this column, I'm waiting in anticipation for the arrival of a friend of mine who is visiting here from Albuquerque for the holidays. Her name is Patty Murphy and she is a senior journalism student at the University of New Mexico, so I'm looking forward as a "seasoned" reporter of six years to showing her around our country newspaper office.

Visiting with Patty in Albuquerque about a month ago, I found her pretty hopeless about prospects for pursuing the journalism which she will be receiving a degree in this month. She had thoughts of perhaps taking a stab at some kind of social work, instead.

One of the reasons for her general uneasiness about doing the Lois Lane thing arose from the fact that so very many are trying to do that these days. Jobs for reporters are hard to come by for both men and women. There's a freeze on at many a major city newspaper, I interviewed her once after she'd returned from doing some social service in poverty-stricken black ghettos up in Ohio.

For one who has always sought "involvement," the journalism of today seems a bit too "dispassionate, objective and accurate." Patty's philosophy, if I think I can state it, is that one can sit around for only so long and say "well let all of these people murder and build, starve and get fat, give birth and die, I'm just a reporter." Only so long, and then he has to take a stand — if he is human.

And so Patty's coming to visit the Canyon News today, and at my request she's bringing an essay that she wrote for one of her classes at the University of New Mexico.

I read the essay while staying with her overnight in Albuquerque. It struck me particularly because it takes up journalism and scrutinizes it as an "amusements" field. Like arts and entertainment.

One doesn't usually think of Newspapers as being on the par with plays, concerts, art or literature. One doesn't think of them as "amusements," except as regards their comic strips.

It's a common joke that many a journalist is in reality a frustrated novelist, bitter because he couldn't make the grade as a "true artist." Condemned, he is, to hide himself and his talents and write news stories, confining himself to the facts, the facts, nothing but the facts.

And yet, it's not much of a feat for a journalist to command an audience, a readership that could make his artistic superiors pea green with envy. Who, after all, reads the newspaper?

Now, myself, I never studied journalism as a major, but rather history, instead. I guess I never picked up the three things the journalism schools are supposed to teach, except maybe by osmosis. That was sort of the reason why I decided to specialize in amusements. I tried my best to steer clear of auto accidents, murders and political goings-ons. Reporting such front-page events seemed like a very awesome thing to be doing and I didn't think I ought to tackle it, not having been trained academically in the three talents. Amusements seemed to be the lighter task, more suitable to my disabilities perhaps more than my talents.

Sometimes I was unhappy because I was not "read" as much as the banner-headline news reporters, but most of the time I was content to perform for a smaller audience, linked together, I believe by their interest in amusements.

Patty's essay, portions of which I wanted to quote in order to "launch her" into the business, dealt with the new era of journalism that she believes ought to come, an era in which journalism goes beyond merely "informing" the public of crying needs and problems in the world. She said the journalism of tomorrow must seek to involve the public, not just inform or "amuse" them. To perform such an awesome feat, she wrote, the truly-committed journalist will have to take up the task of making his stories "sparkle and shine."

I tried to encourage my friend by telling her she just might have it in her to be a star reporter if she could turn out an essay like that, capable of sparking the interest of a seasoned old vet like me.

Soil Survey Hints Given Through SCS

How soil surveys can help you is the subject of a new set of color brochures available from the Soil Conservation Service in Canyon.

The leaflets are designed to describe uses which can be made of soil surveys by nine different groups including home buyers, builders, developers, land use planners, land appraisers, farmers, ranchers, construction engineers, and others.

District Conservationist Bill Casteel said single copies of the leaflets are available free from his office.

Soil surveys have been made on about 585,000 acres of land in Randall County as part of the national cooperative soil survey.

The surveys are made by SCS soil scientists who examine the soil acre-by-acre. They record depth, percent sand or clay in each layer, acidity or alkalinity, wetness, flood hazard, and other features by soil name symbols on aerial photographs.

Casteel said the survey for Randall County is published and copies are available.

Soil surveys can be interpreted to determine suitability of soil for home sites, building foundations, septic tank filter fields, gardens, cropland, trees, parks, fill material, and other uses.

They can also be used to predict depth to bedrock; location of sand, gravel, or caliche deposits; corrosivity to metal pipelines; shrink-swell hazards; and dozens of other features.

Casteel urged anyone interested in soil surveys to contact his office for a free leaflet explaining how surveys can be used. If making your request by mail, specify your business or special interest so you will receive the leaflet designed for you.

The Canyon SCS office is located at 304 15th Street (rear). The mailing address is P.O. Box 239, telephone number 655-4411.

Don Dolle of the Soil Conservation Service puts up a display of brochures available to explain how to use soil survey maps which have been prepared for the SCS. The maps have a large number of uses for farmers, builders and others.

A House And Home Rebuilt

A Year Later, Quintanas Remember Generosity

By ANN MELIN
"We are very happy people today," Paul Quintana had said after a fire destroyed his family's home in the wee hours of morning on Nov. 30 of last year. "We all have our lives."
In an interview shortly after the conflagration that sent the eight-member Quintana family's 60-year-old frame house up in smoke, the wife of Quintana had explained that the children were begging to go see what the house looked like after the fire, but "with all the excitement and moving around, we haven't had the chance to go back and look yet."
Returning to the site of the house that turned to ashes last year, one finds erected upon its foundation two small frame houses, their white paint badly chipping, which are joined together in a kind of ramshackle matrimony. The picket fence surrounding the Siamese-twinninged domicile is the same that once blocked off its six-room predecessor.

The two small houses were purchased at a very cheap price from an Amarillo man who had earlier offered to donate a house to the family and have it transported from Amarillo to the site of the destroyed home. However, when he endeavored to move the house, he found that the foundations were too badly rotted and that the transportation could not be done. He therefore purchased the two small houses and sold them to the family, who themselves undertook the constructive task of bringing the houses together.

The total destruction of their home and most of their belongings last year was the second tragedy the Quintanas weathered within a relatively short period of time. The other occurred in 1971 when the father, stricken by crippling arthritis, was forced to quit his job as head custodian at Gene Howe Elementary School. He has not returned to work since and is currently receiving social security benefits which, alongside his wife's paycheck, add up to about $434 a month. Mrs. Quintana is a cafeteria worker at Rex Reeves Elementary School.
On Friday, this reporter accompanied Catholic Family Service worker Carmen Hernandez to the new Quintana home in an effort to do a follow-up on the family. Mrs.

Hernandez was bringing the family a box of groceries purchased by the Family Services from monies donated by people and organizations in Canyon for Thanksgiving tokens. She was also going to discuss with Quintana the possibility of further assistance through a governmental disabilities program.
Greeting Mrs. Hernandez and this reporter at the door was Mary Ann Quintana, a pretty, quiet-mannered girl of fifteen years. A quick tour of the house revealed that the many items donated to the family by the people of Canyon after last year's sensational misfortune were in active daily use. A large refrigerator into which the box of donated groceries were about to be unloaded, was itself last year's donation. Although much of the furniture in the house was purchased second-hand by the Quintanas, some of it came to them last year from Canyon folk eager to relieve the distress of the family. Two of the beds in use were donations as were the dishes. The ones from which the family had eaten that morning were drying out on the rack next to the sink.

Asking about the two identical dolls that were sitting on a table in the living room next to this year's framed school photographs of some of the children, this reporter was informed that they, too, were donations.
Quintana, speaking in a solemn, serene voice, said that the family today, one year after its fiery calamity, is "very, very happy."

"We have our problems. We've had to go in debt to finance a lot of the repairs on the house. And I guess we may not have the kind of bounteous Christmas we had last year what with all the generosity of the people of Canyon. But we've got the memory of that generosity and we can never, never forget that. I never knew just how good people can be... I guess I had to find out the hard way."
The family residing in the house on 112 N. 8th St. between the railroad tracks and the Hereford Highway now consists of seven members. Son Larry, 19, has entered the Armed Forces and is now stationed at Fort Knox, Ky. "First time he's ever been away from Canyon," his father said.
"A good boy," Quintana said of the son who on that November morning helped his mother to battle the flames and, finding the effort futile, aided her in removing the invalid father and children from the burning house.
"He'll be here for Christmas holidays and then he's going to be transferred to Germany," his mother said, a look of pride in her eyes. "He had a choice of either signing up for Hawaii or Germany and he picked the European assignment."
In last year's interview, Mrs.

Veronica Quintana and her doll, a gift from one of many Canyon benefactors.

Violinist Chase Captivates Audience

Review by STANLEY POTTER
The members of Canyon Community Concerts enjoyed a rare musical experience Tuesday evening, Nov. 26, at the Canyon High School auditorium.
The occasion was a recital by violinist Stefanie Chase. With her appearance on the stage the audience was first captivated by her disarming youth, then amazed by the maturity of her performance.

Miss Chase began her program with the appealing and superbly violinistic "Vivaldi Sonata in D major." The Sonata survived admirably the accompaniment realized by Respighi, thanks to the combined efforts of the performers.

The program continued with the "Kreutzer" Sonata of Beethoven, famous in its own right as well as in Thomas Mann's story called "The Kreutzer Sonata."
Violin music in the tradition of 19th century virtuosos made up the second half of the program:

Mike Criswells Announce Birth
The Mike Criswells of 516 12th Avenue, Canyon, announce the November 25 birth of a son at 9:54 a.m. at Neblett Memorial Hospital in Canyon.
The baby boy has been named Casey Britten Criswell and weighed 7 pounds 9 ounces at birth and measured 20 inches in length.
The infant's father is a former student of West Texas State University and is employed as the meat market manager with Cooper's Thriftway in Canyon.
Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. R.C. Fawver of Floydada, Texas and the paternal grandparents are Rev. and Mrs. James A. Criswell of West Fork, Arkansas.

works by Fritz Kreisler and Henri Wieniawski, and transcriptions of works by Bartok and Chopin.
Miss Chase would be an exceptional violinist at any age. Her sound is bright, yet warm and fluid. Her execution is facile without being glib. And the freshness of her youth is reinforced with a large measure of maturity.
The success of the evening would not have been so inevitable without the meticulous support of the accompanist Judith Olson.
After the superb performance, a reception for the artists at the Irbey Carruths was attended by a large number of the audience.

Funeral Rites Held For Roger Schrib
Final rites for Roger Lee Schrib, 45, were conducted Friday, November 29, at 10 a.m. at the First United Methodist Church in Canyon with Rev. Bill Kent, pastor, officiating.
Mr. Schrib died November 27 at High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo. He was born in Hale Center, Texas July 21, 1929 and married the former Carol Hamblen at Clovis, New Mexico, May 28, 1950.
He moved to Canyon from Ringold, Texas and operated Rogers Gulf Service Station at 711 23rd Street, Canyon. He was a member of the First United Methodist Church here.
Funeral arrangements were handled by LaGrone Funeral Home in Canyon and interment was at Dreamland Cemetery. Active pallbearers were J. D. Byrd, Lynn Crabtree, J. M. Black, Harry M. Stackhouse, Fred Roberson and David Levens. Honorary pallbearers were Gene Johnson, Vance Robinson, Ronnie Hager, Randy Hamblen, Larry Vaughn and Kim Heathington.
Survivors include his widow, Carol of 2004 4th Avenue, Canyon; a son, Gary Schrib of 1107 9th Avenue, Canyon; two daughters, Mrs. Cindy Carlile of New Baden, Ill., and Mrs. Debra Wiley of Valley Mills, Texas; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schrib of Wayside; and three grandchildren.

County Faces Light Agenda
Randall County commissioners face a short agenda for their regular Monday meeting. They will meet at 1 p.m. Monday in commissioners courtroom in the Canyon courthouse to discuss the following:
* Attendance of county tax office personnel at an institute for tax assessors in Austin.
* Annual report from Mrs. Audrey Bruse, tax collector.
* Signing a minute order from the Texas Highway Department for improvements on Western Street near the South Amarillo city limits.

Gospel Road Film Presentation Set Tonight At CJHS

"The Gospel Road" will be presented for the public Sunday, December 1, at 6 p.m. at the Canyon Junior High School auditorium under the sponsorship of the First Baptist Church of Canyon.
Distributed by World Wide Pictures, the film tells the story of Jesus Christ in a realistic and meaningful way and was conceived and produced by Johnny Cash and his wife, June Carter Cash.
The film is a blend of scripture-based narrative with an abundant supply of specially written songs and a series of in-depth character portrayals with Israel itself as the mixing bowl.
The public has been invited to attend the presentation of the film this evening at the Canyon Junior High School auditorium.
